1. Indicator

8.10.2 Proportion of adults (15 years and older) with an account at a bank or other financial institution or with a mobile-money-service provider.

2. International definition

The custodian agency for this indicator is the World Bank, which compiles it from the Global Findex Database. The international definition counts as “account holders” all respondents who report having an account in their own name, or jointly with someone else, at a bank or another regulated financial institution, or who report having personally used a mobile-money service in the past twelve months.

3. National data source

Curaçao reports this indicator from the Omnibus Social Survey, supplemented by administrative data from licensed institutions where available. The reference population is residents aged 15 and older. Mobile-money usage is captured through a dedicated module added to the survey in 2023.

4. Computation

The indicator is computed as the number of weighted respondents who report holding at least one qualifying account, divided by the total weighted population aged 15 and older. Sample weights are produced by the Central Bureau of Statistics using the most recent census frame and post-stratification adjustments.

5. Disaggregation

Headline figures are published for the total adult population. Disaggregation by sex and age band is provided where sample sizes permit reliable estimates.

6. Limitations and revisions

Survey-based account-ownership measures are subject to sampling and non-sampling error. Results may differ from administrative aggregates from licensed institutions because of duplicate accounts, inactive accounts, and accounts held by non-residents. Revisions will be documented in this note when published.
